

5Days-4Nights Sumatra Bukittinggi Tours

Bukittinggi is a small town, so these places are within walking distance with each other (15-30 minute walk).

* Sianok Canyon (Ngarai Sianok) and the Japanese Caves (Lubang Jepang), a network of underground bunkers and tunnels built by the Japanese during World War II. There is a two-story observation tower that overlooks the Sianok Canyon. During dusk you can observe megabats flying from the gorges to the forest in order to feed from the fruits on the trees.

* Fort de Kock. A fort built by the Dutch (nothing is left, only a water reservoir is on top of the hill) and Bundo Kanduang Park. The park includes a replica Rumah Gadang (traditional house), used as a museum of Minangkabau culture (many curiosities, such as stuffed animals with two heads and six legs, model houses, traditional dresses and a zoo with a few very sad Orang Utans, a few expired species which are still rotting in their cages, two obese bears - not exactly a example in modern animal keeping. The Dutch hilltop outpost Fort de Kock is connected to the zoo by the Limpapeh pedestrian overpass.

* House of Bung Hatta (the first Vice President of Indonesia).

* Clock Tower (Jam Gadang).
